PERSONALITIES I HAVE MET.—THEDA BARA.

Sept. 12, 1916, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate. Entered at Stationers Hall, London, England, as second-class matter, September 12, 1916. Postpaid. Publication of this article in whole or in part is expressly prohibited except by special arrangement with The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It is strange that in our profession, where we pass each other six days out of seven, it is often years before we meet. That has been the case with Theda Bara and myself. I have always admired her, but at the parties or professional entertainments where we have been destined to meet either she or I was called away and missed the pleasure which has long been promised us.

However, the other evening I sat right back of her at a moving picture theater where one of her latest pictures was being shown. Somehow or other, I felt it was Miss Bara who entered the theater, in spite of the fact that she wore a very heavy, dark veil which almost hid her features from the curious gaze of the public.

Her hat was very small, so she did not have to remove it during the run of the picture, but simply raised her veil, disclosing very lovely features which are almost Oriental in their cast.

What a strange perfume that woman sitting in front of us uses, my mother whispered to me. "It reminds me of the Orient. It is pungent and yet it is subtle."

I think she must have heard us, for she turned her head slowly and glanced out of the corner of her long eyelashes.

"Well, now we're in for some fun," the fat man who sat next to me remarked as he settled down in his seat. "If there is one actress in this better than the other, it is Theda Bara. She's certainly got even my wife beat for disposition!"

He wiped the perspiration off his brow as he confided all this to his friend, a very thin, aesthetic-looking man, who craned his neck forward so he would miss none of the picture.

"Oh, dear, but I bet she's a wicked woman!" And the aesthetic friend shook his head sadly, as if he would have liked them to reform the pictured vampire Theda.

"No!"—and the fat man shook his head sadly in denial of the other man's inspiration—"I bet she's not!" I'll wager fifty cents that off the screen she's as tame as an old hen."

The veiled lady who sat in front of us turned slowly and a smile curved the corner of her mouth, while the fat friend who was with her hid her face in the palm of her hand to keep from giggling aloud.

"Yes," the fat man continued, "they're always disappointing, these vampires are, when you meet 'em. The fact of it is, they never seem to vamp anywhere except in the parts suit to collect back taxes from the recently annexed territory, comprising a part of Alexandria and Fairfax counties."

My friend, who had been informed that the people would have to elect one in November and whoever was selected would, therefore, come up for election in November.

TWENTY-SECOND CHILD IN VIRGINIAN'S HOME

Joseph C. Mohler, Centerville Farmer, Deserves Roosevelt's Praise.

One ardent admirer and consistent disciple of Rooseveltian principles is Joseph C. Mohler, a farmer living at Centerville, Fairfax County, Virginia, whose wife recently presented him with a healthy young son.

The new arrival is the twenty-second child who has blessed the Mohler home during the past forty years, and although several of the children have died, enough of them bearing the Mohler name have come forth from the little village to establish a family tree which bids fair to rival the proportions of the famous Gen. Sherman tree in California.

In these days of market quotations showing skyrocket prices of all foodstuffs the record of Mr. Mohler is all the more remarkable, but, as he says, the old family pantry will always yield a meal when it is supported by fertile Virginia soil, from which enough food can be garnered to supply a regiment.

Mr. Mohler fought in the civil war and in many of the skirmishes he was leading on land directly adjacent to his home, which is but a few miles from the famous Bull Run battlefield.

About the hardest problem he has been up against, according to his statement, was that of providing suitable names for his progeny, but the many new names that have been coined in the past few years have even solved that difficulty. He has been married twice, and his present wife is the embodiment of health.

Although he has surpassed the records in this respect of the other members of his family, they have not been lax. His mother had thirteen children, a brother and sister five each, and his father six. Mr. Mohler is also the grandfather of fourteen.

At one time during the life of his mother it would have been possible to gather together more than 100 members of the Mohler family.
